If you are trying to find Open Access and discount information for a journal that is not one associated with a publisher on this list, here are some steps to obtain this information:

1) Visit the publisher's website and look for a link about their Open Access policy. Note that it may be located in the guidelines or instructions for authors. OA options are not always clearly listed or may not even be available. They may also be referred to by names other than "Gold" or "Green".

2) The discount information will typically be found in one of three areas:
- a) somewhere on the Open Access page
- b) on a page about Article Processing Charges (APCs) or
- c) in a link found on those pages that will point to a page about waiver/discount

Note that waivers/discounts can vary by journal from the same publisher, who will typically list those exceptions.
